

Become a Business Volunteers for the Arts Team Lead

Are you an experienced Business Volunteer for the Arts (BVA) consultant who wants to take the next step in your Arts & Business Council of Chicago experience while enhancing your own skills and career? Consider becoming a BVA Team Lead!

Business Volunteers for the Arts Team Leads serve as project managers for client projects. They are responsible for leading discussions on project processes and scope, creating project work plans, bringing the team together, and guiding the project to completion.

“ Learning the A&BC process in a fun and collaborative training environment really paid off. It gives me the confidence to take on leadership roles on the project teams I participate on. I feel it makes me a more valuable and sought-after employee for various cross functional teams. And finally, it definitely helped prepare me for a spot on the Board of an arts organization – a long time goal of mine. ”

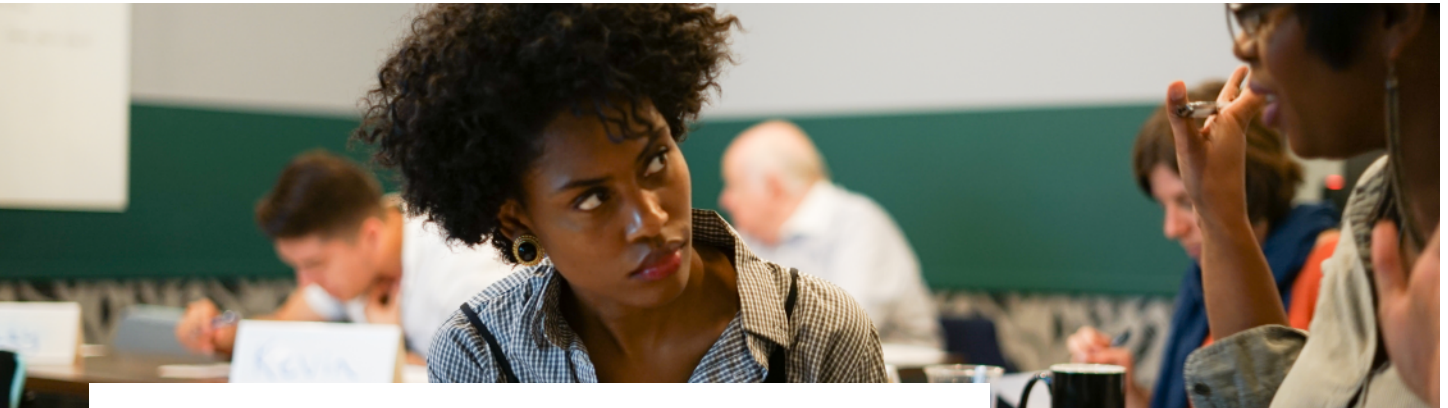

Michelle Erikson,
BVA Team Lead

“ Team Lead training has been a unique avenue for me to develop skills for both BVA projects and my day-to-day job. The training gave me tactics to apply leadership, understand team dynamics, and effectively work together to create the best product for the client. Team Lead training was a great way to renew these skills. ”

Wilma Qiu,
BVA Team Lead

Interested in becoming a BVA Team Lead?

Team Leads have a variety of backgrounds and levels of experience, but they all meet the following requirements:

- Have served on at least one BVA project
- Have been nominated by another BVA consultant to participate
- Have professional experience serving as a project manager and leading a team
- Identify with the BVA Team Lead core competencies:
 - Clear Communication
 - Effective Resource Management
 - Adaptability
 - Collaboration
- Will commit to up 6 hours to obtain certification

Ready to take the next step as a Business Volunteer for the Arts? Click here to apply!

If you have questions about becoming a BVA Team Lead, contact BVA Program

Director Sarah Frye at sfrye@ArtsBiz-Chicago.org.

